The casualty companies of said, and the insurance companies had lots of influence with the State Insurance Department to facilitate the plan. He thought the State fund would be in safer hands if placed under the supervision of the State Comptroller or State Superintendent of Banks.

For Widows and Children.

Judge McDonough suggested many Amendments to the compensation law. He would cut down the waiting period injured employees from two weeks to which would give them an additional week's compensation; make pro-vision for dependent children over 18 who are physically unable to provide for themselves; give dependent widows 30 per cent, of the average wages of their deceased husbands, instead of 15: in-crease compensation 15 per cent, where there was no question of the careless-ness of the employer: extend from ten to thirty days the time in which an injured employee may file notice of injury; give the injured the right to call his own physician at the expense of the insurance company, and the abolish-ment of direct payments.

John Fitzgillons of Oswego charactertzed the amendments that have already been made to the law as "a damnable outrage," and insisted that the legisla-tors apparently were going to butcher the compensation law still more. He insisted the injured workmen of the State were not received.
